

The Daily Gazetteer.

NUMB. 3.

TUESDAY, JULY 10, 1744.

Yesterday arriv'd a Mail from Holland.

Constantinople, May 27.

L-L Things are here pretty much in the same Situation that they were, except that the Grand Vizir being extremely jealous of the Capudan Bassa, and of Ragui Bassa, has found Means to have the former exil'd, under Pretence of Commanding into the Archipelago, notwithstanding the Sultan; and the latter was the Favourite of the Sultan; and the latter to Grand Cairo. The Porte is determined to keep any Hostilities on the Coasts of its Dominions, and of the European Powers at War; and it has been signified to all the Foreign Ministers here, that no Privateer shall presume to make Capture within it. The News from Persia remains uncertain as formerly, our Seraskier not being able to maintain an Army sufficient to act offensively; and Kouli being obliged to lay aside all Thoughts of attacking, in order to compose some Troubles that are broke out in the Principality of Candahar.

June 19. The Marquis de la Chetardie set out from this City, in a very ill Humour. He made the utmost Efforts to obtain, first of all, an Audience of the Empress; when he found that impracticable, he desired the Chamberlain, who brought the Letter for his Departure, to present a Letter from him to her Imperial Majesty; which was also absolutely refused. He then contented himself with drawing up a memorial, addressed to one of the Ministers, concerning very strong Terms. What contributed not a little to this, was two Pieces of News he heard before his Departure; the first, that the Empress had written a Letter to his most Christian Majesty, with her own hand, demanding Satisfaction for his ill Conduct; the second, that Lord Tyrwally had been invited to Trothia, was to set out To-morrow. He desired to be consulted with the utmost Expedition to the Frontiers of India; but it is very much doubted, whether he will be able to leave any Time at Berlin, as he designs.

June 23. The Regency continues to act here with the utmost Vigour, in sending Provisions, and other Necessaries, to the Royal Camp at Veletri; from where an Order arrived lately, directing all the Ready Money in the Treasury to be sent thither immediately; which was not only complied with, but the Nobles, of their own Free Will, added 500,000 Crowns, as a Second Free Gift to his Majesty. This will appear to the World a very strong Mark of Loyalty and Affection; and some Politicians here imagine, that it flows from a Consciousness of great Discoveries being made, as to the secret Correspondencies with the Austrians, for which they are willing to atone in Time, lest Affairs should take a wrong Turn; and the rather, because it is known, that the Count de Sora has been obliged to abandon his Enterprize, in order to join the grand Army. The Count de Gages, by establishing a strict Discipline, which hinders the Neapolitan Soldiers from being charmed at the Will of their Officers, and secures to them many other Privileges, has so won their Hearts, that contrary to all Expectation, they adhere to the present Government with remarkable Steadiness, and have given many considerable Marks of their Courage.

June 4. M. Caloen, the Dutch Minister at the Ottoman Porte, arrived here on the 1st, had the Honour to pay an Audience of her Majesty, and, it is thought, to remain for some Time in this Capital. The Prince de Saxe-Hildburghausen is appointed to command in chief in the Duchy of Milan; and has Orders to set out immediately. Her Majesty is determined to send 2000 Men to the Relief of the King of Sardinia; and to talk here, that for the greater Expedition, they will be convey'd in Carriages. It is reported with greater Confidence than ever, that the Venetians propose to assist her Majesty with a considerable Body of Troops, for which they are to receive a Subsidy. An Express lately arrived from Prince Lobkowitz, with the News, that he has recover'd the Posts taken from him by the Common Army; yet it does not appear that the Court is at all sanguine as to the Success of that General.

Frankfort, July 12. We have this Moment the disagreeable News, that the French and Imperialists have been obliged, once more, to abandon the Lines of Weissenberg, in order to take Possession of the Posts of Hagenau; and that the Austrians having been rejoined by General Berenclaus, have not only occupied the Lines of Weissenberg, but have even penetrated as far as the Forest of Hagenau. It is thought, that the Imperial Court is not more chagrined at this News, than at a Letter written by M. Seckendorff to his Imperial Majesty; in which he informs him, that in the last Action, which was so remarkably bloody, the French cover'd themselves behind the Imperial Fort and Hessian Dragoons, and that the latter are in a manner ruined, which may, perhaps, incline them to quit the Service.

Lille, July 11. His most Christian Majesty could scarce be brought to believe that Prince Charles of Lorraine had passed the Rhine; and, when he was convinc'd of it, expressed a very warm Resentment against Marshal Coigny. At a Council of War, held immediately after, there were very high Debates, which ended in a Resolution of sending M. Belleisle, with his Army, to the Rhine; where he is to command instead of Marshal Coigny. The Duke de Harcourt is to follow him with 70,000 Men. The King will return to Paris; and only a Flying Camp will be left in Flanders. His Majesty declared Yesterday at Dinner, that he was determined to continue the War; and that, on his Return to Paris, he would give immediate Directions for the levying 60,000 Men, to be added to the Militia; in order to replace the like Number that should be incorporated into the Regular Troops.

Hague, July 17. According to the last Letters from the Army of the Allies, the French are in continual Motion; but, as yet, it cannot be determined, whether they intend to attack the Allies, or to march the most of their Forces to the Rhine: The former is said to be the Advice of M. Noailles, and the latter of M. d'Argenson. The late Action at Weissenberg does much more Credit to the Imperial, than to the French General. It is acknowledged, that M. Seckendorff shew'd all the great Qualities requisite in a General; whereas M. de Coigny contented himself with endeavouring to save his Troops at the Expence of their Allies.

IRELAND.

Dublin, July 3. We hear from Cork, that the Jamaica Ship call'd the Hannah, of London, of 250 Tons, brought in there by the Old Noll Privateer, of Liverpool, which she retok from a French Privateer, was laden with Rum, Sugar, and Indico. And on Monday last the said Privateer brought in a French Ship from Newfoundland, laden with Fish and Oil; having also 30 Persons on board, which were brought up there Prisoners, three of whom are Irishmen.

By a Letter from Limerick, of the 16th Instant, there arrived there the Day before, a Dogger that was brought too by a French Privateer of 30 Guns, and 250 Men, which last Week took a Ship laden at Bristol, Beams, Master, bound to Galway, with Tobacco, and other Goods. The said Beams wrote a Letter by the Master of the Dogger, of his being taken off of the Dorset, near the County of Kerry.

THAT a Method is found out, for which his Majesty's Royal Patent is granted to the Inventor, Mr. Sutton, for extracting Air by Fire, at any Distance, greater or less, in such Manner, that the Air is taken out will be constantly supplied with fresh down the Shaft, by which Means the Air will be kept sweet and wholesome for Respiration; and this will be done constantly Night and Day, only by keeping a small Fire, and laying Pipes into the Gate or Ash-holes, which Pipes may be made of Wood, Lead, Copper, Tin, Brick, or any other Material, whereby a Canal, or Cavity, may be formed. He can also cause a Fire to run under Ground, in Drains or Chimnies, the Heat whereof shall be sufficient for raising Melons, Oranges, Lemons, and vine-Apples, or any other exotic Plants, in Greenhouses or Stoves; which Fire may be made to burn with a more intense or lesser Degree of Heat, or to rest intirely for two or three Days together, and to revive again of itself; or, by laying Drains wider or closer together, they may have a Heat in a greater or less Degree, sufficient to dry any Quantity of Malt, or Hops, without being affected by Smoak, so that the Malt will be much better for brewing any Liquor.
He hath made an Experiment of it, at his House in Alder-gate-Street, where any Gentlemen, who are curious, may be satisfied of the Usefulness of this Invention.

Note, This Contrivance is a Part of the Scheme contrived by Mr. Sutton, for drawing the foul Air out of Ships, &c.
the Manner and Usefulness of which is described by Dr. Mead, in the Philosophical Transactions, who was pleased to be at the Expence of having a Model of it made of Copper, which he presented to the Royal Society.
